

7 good reasons to learn a foreign language

In effect, it is very important to understand why we want to learn a foreign language in order to be able to take on the long term. Here are 7 good reasons to learn a foreign language...

1 - To travel and meet with the people

I believe that a true travel is done in discovering by itself the culture and the life of the inhabitants of the country. Otherwise, as much watch a documentary quietly at home, you will have all the landscapes without moving from the sofa. In addition, this fact CO2 savings!

2 - for the work

Oh yes, English for example became the passage obliged for many positions. The Spanish can be useful also for some jobs (3e most spoken language: 350 million people)

3 - For a boy or girl (friend)

With the multicultural patch linked to immigration and globalization, the mixed couples are more and more frequent. I know something about that, and it is a very good reason to learn the language

4 - For the cerebral drive

Oh yes, he must do work its neurons to avoid that his brain aging too quickly. Learn a foreign language is an intellectual activity very exciting and more useful than DS games which are a cardboard box.

Claude Hage ensures that "the bilingual have a malleability and a cognitive flexibility superior to those of unilingual. The knowledge of a second language would thus help develop a verbal intelligence, conceptual training, a global reasoning and to stimulate the discovery of the underlying rules to the solution of problems."

5 - For the beauty of the Language

Some languages have a rhythm singing very pleasant to hear. Personally, I find that the Spanish has a very beautiful sound. Others have a written form very attractive (Japanese, Mandarin, etc.. )

6 - For the curiosity

The curiosity and the desire to understand other cultures. This can bring an open mind, greater tolerance, and the enrichment of the identity of the individual.

7 - By passion for the linguistic

Some people are interested in the linguistic aspects of another language and decide to learn for his interest in language.

Prof. Oscar.S.K / tel: 919701574923