

Photography courses by Randhir Verma

Imagine having a professional photographer in your cupboard.

Someone who you could bring out from time to time to help with your photography, at whom you could aim all those questions you've saved up - technical issues, composition, exposure, post processing or printing.

Someone to set you projects, to evaluate and critique your work. Then when you've had enough you simply pop them back in the cupboard till the next time. Sound good?

Well there you have it – that's the basis of this Program. Except that I won't of course be living in your cupboard....Over the last few years I have received so many emails and telephone calls about the possibility of learning photography, that I finally decided to do something about it! There are many photography courses on the market today, so the ultimate goal was to be able to offer something unique, specialised and completely tailored, something that could not possibly be offered anywhere else.

This program offers a completely custom designed course, run over a period that suits you, and based entirely on two things – where you are with your photography today and where you realistically want to be at the end of that period.

I look forward to see you soon.
