

The leather cup is raised up or lowered down first to measure the atmospheric pressure, it is done using a screw S so that the ivory pointer I just touches the level of mercury in the glass vessel. The point of the mercury level in the barometer tube is observed using the main scale and the vernier scale. The addition of the vernier scale reading to the main scale reading yields barometric height.