

Appearance isn't everything Task-2

There are popular sayings which goes by "Don't judge a book by its cover" and "All that glitters is not gold. These sayings are is make people realize the importance of the innate character of a person or a thing rather than going by its outer appearance, because looks can be deceiving.

The society is a smorgasbord, we have people here who are basic in their personality and clothing but the knowledge they have cannot be equitable with all the individuals combined together. Even things like healthy diets and home cooked food which are not attractive, but are the healthiest and beneficial for a long and healthy life.

On the other hand, the society is running towards a way where everything is overwhelming. Weighing is give to something or someone with the best of looks, personality and fashion. The appearance because prominent is attracting masses and creating a pre-eminence. This creates a sense of popularity and respect to some extent. But, it may happen these glittering things can create a pernicious effect on a large number of population especially children. This can also contribute to the development of overweening personality.

There is no disagreement that looks play a vital role in gaining a dominant position in the society but it only should not be considered paramount. There should be teachings that to become eminent, charismatic and valued in the world development of a behaviour should be inculcated so as to acquire a prominent stance, especially to the kids as they should grow up with a thought of "only appearance is everything for success".

To conclude, I would like to sum up with my opinion that nothing should be sneered upon on the basis of looks, but everyone and everything should be respected and also taught to be respected.
