

Kind people are always thought of as good people. Being kind means a person is caring, polite, and to people around them. Many people in this world lack this virtue and want to hurt each other. Kindness should be the first base of character building in any person. Kind people don't hurt others. They understand and value each others feelings and emotions. Providing support and helping people in their troubles are some highlights of kind people. One need to be caring, supportive, compassionate, and helpful to be kind.
