

OPINION ESSAY-4

Q) It is believed that women are more suited to child-rearing than men. What is your opinion on this issue?

From time immemorial, it has been an accepted fact that a female the feminine gender is more capable in upbringing a child than the masculine. I agree with this opinion as nature itself has provided her with an inbuilt power to cater to a child's need anytime and anywhere.

Outline ??

To begin with a woman gives birth to a child so there is definitely a special bond between them. Moreover, when a new-born is fed for the first time that very second, he starts recognizing her touch and smell, not ignoring the fact that sense organs in him are not yet fully developed. In addition to this he always has a sound sleep near his mother as he feels very safe. secure Babies never cry in their mother's arms but as soon as someone else picks them up they make the whole world up and down. Of course, later they also feel very comfortable with their father too. To quote an example, when a baby is emotionally upset, a mother's presence or touch soothes him very quickly as compared to others.

On one hand, women are more patient, caring and loving whereas on the other hand, they are strict, disciplined and strong when it comes to raising a kid. Children always need someone's guidance and support right from their birth till adulthood for matters related to food, health and many other issues too. It would not be wrong to say that a mother can do this more perfectly than anyone else. However, for education purposes the father also has a key role to play. For vaccination and regular health checkups it is the mother who always accompanies her child as she is the best knowledgeable person when it comes to having a conversation with a doctor. To quote from a personal experience, my daughters always discuss their personal life with me and look up for advice in certain matters as well.

To summarize, I would like to reiterate my opinion, that as a woman gives birth and takes care of a child through thick and thin she is a better person to raise him when compared to a man.
