THE FIVE MAJOR FACTORS IN A STUDENT'S LIFE

The last decade or so has witnessed stiff competition in most sectors especially in the education arena. Competition amongst students is so intense that even parents get stressed. It is often seen that in a bid to reprimand their child, parents start comparing performances. Instead of motivating a child, this does quite the opposite — it demoralises him/ her. Education experts say that parents need to be more patient and find different yet effective ways to motivate their kids.

Today, one of the major concerns that inhibits a student's growth is when a parent starts comparing them with their neighbour's, relative's, friend's daughter or son, in a negative manner. Only if this comparison is taken in a positive, rational and pragmatic manner will a student accept this comparison as a challenge. Parents and teachers collectively share the responsibility of motivating students by focusing on their strengths instead of berating

Abhilash Sinha

- The parent — a child's very first teacher.
- The school and college — an education partner of sorts.
- The mentor and coach at their tuition or coaching class.
- Their environment — relatives, friends and surrounding
- The student himself.

"If the last factor becomes determined, passionate and enthusiastic, a student doesn't need any push to move forward. All they require are proper guidance and strict discipline, etc, which they get from the other four abovementioned factors discussed above," explains Abhilash Sinha, Founder, Ace Institute.
