

BRITISH[™]
ACADEMY
Transforming Futures

Advanced
English Course

Basic Introduction

How to represent yourself?

As there are many occasions where one needs to introduce himself, such as social, professional, political etc places. In each occasion introduction varies to situation.

Advance Grammar:

A) Descriptive and Prescriptive Grammar:

Descriptive and Prescriptive Grammar

One common way to divide the different types of English grammars available is to label them descriptive or prescriptive, though a grammar may contain elements of both.

The principles around which they are written are very different; a prescriptive grammar is one that lays down the rules for English language usage, while a descriptive grammar synthesises rules for English usage from the language that people actually use. A prescriptive grammarian believes that certain forms used are correct and that others, even though they may be used by native speakers, are incorrect. Many prescriptivists feel that modern linguistics, which tends to place emphasis on actual rather than perceived language usage, is responsible for a decline in the standard of language.

Descriptivists look at the way people speak and then try to create rules that account for the language usage, accepting alternative forms that are used regionally and also being open to forms used in speech that traditional grammars would describe as errors.

Who's Right?

Advanced English Course

Index

- | | | |
|--|---------------------------------------|-------------------------------|
| 1) Basic Introduction | VIII. Modifiers | Euphemism |
| 2) Presentation Skills | a) Adjective | Hyperbole |
| I. Lectures | b) Adverb | Irony |
| II. Tutorials | IX. Noun and Adjective Clause | Litotes |
| 3) Pronunciation and Accent | X. Regrets | Metaphor |
| 4) Phonology | XI. Question Tags | Metonymy |
| 5) Advance Grammar | XII. Degrees | Onomatopoeia |
| I. Descriptive and Prescriptive Grammar | XIII. The Use of By + Until | Oxymoron |
| II. Types of sentences | XIV. Using 'Shall' in British English | Paradox |
| III. Tenses | XV. Using 'Wish' in English | Personification |
| IV. English Conditionals | XVI. Whether and If | Pun |
| a) Zero Conditional | XVII. Rather | Simile |
| b) First Conditional | When do we use rather in English? | Synecdoche |
| c) Second Condition | 6) Figures of speech | Understatement |
| d) Third Condition | Alliteration | 7) Public speaking Skills |
| V. Models | Anaphora | 8) Writing Skills |
| VI. Voices | Antithesis | 9) Listening Skills |
| VII. Reporting (Direct and Indirect)Speech | Apostrophe | 10) Idiom, proverbs, phrases |
| | Assonance | 11) Vocabulary with reference |
| | Chiasmus | 12) Literary short stories |

And the final 2 projects to be submitted. Also has tests on regular intervals and games and activities to make the learning enjoyable.