Nowadays many countries have very cosmopolitan cities with people from all over the world. How can the government ensure that all these people can live together harmoniously?

Give reasons for your answer and include any relevant examples from your own knowledge or experience.

Modern cities are becoming a mini world in a quick time. The variety of culture co-existing in any metropolis cities is a common feature even though on few occasions it creates tension among communities. This essay will identify the reasons for this growing culture and also suggest how respective governments can ensure all cities a better place of living.

Crossing borders are not a hindrance in the present world. A lot better transport facilities and liberal immigration policies are helping people to move internationally rather easily compared to what was happening two or three decades ago. Moreover, this scenario is also supported by the fact that, now, educational qualifications of the person counts more than his or her color or creed. Mostly these opportunities lie in major cities. Instances of people moving from developed world to developing countries are an ample example for this. So, as long as people continue to move around based on individual taste and choices we will see this trend flourishing.

At the same time skirmishes between communities is a regular feature in many metros. Authorities can deal with it two ways: enforce strict laws and create more awareness. Stringent law enforcement with severe punishments to a large extent will be able to create fear among rioters. In addition to that, local authorities should also shoulder the responsibility of bringing the different communities together by creating opportunities to know and share each others culture. It is an accepted fact that ignorance is the main culprit in many occasions that lead to violence.

To conclude, the world is becoming a global village. This essay discussed why the migration of people have become a regular and popular feature in modern life. It also put forth a few plans governments can bring in making the daily lives more cooperative and peaceful.
