

I'm a professor working at JBR Architecture college. A new subject - Personality Development has been introduced to the 7th semester students. Ms. Sreeveni was invited to take a lecture as she is a self worth influencer. She spoke about our self worth, how to make the best first impression and I feel that she has made a great impact on the young minds by delivering her insights in a very pragmatic way that the students could relate to. She brought in her personal experiences which added a great depth in bringing forth the essence of her speech. She added in many examples which the students definitely found very interesting. She augmented her lecture with research data that added value. In the three hours of her lecture, she simply breezed through and the students wanting to hear more. I'm greatly appreciative of her efforts in spreading the message that each one of us is as unique as our thumb and should unleash our true worth.
