To Whom It May Concern:

This is a letter of recommendation for Inderpreet Kaur. Inder worked for us as a Summer Workshop teacher in the summer of 2015. Although she travelled 1.5 hours each way to get to and from the studio, she never complained about the drive and was able to be ready to go at the beginning of the morning class each day.

Her position as art teacher included following a very strict curriculum and teaching a method developed by this company. Within those restrictions, Inder was expected to adjust her teaching methods according to what each of her students needed – we have a group environment of up to 12 students with 2 teachers per workshop, and although everyone works on the same type of project, we teach each student individually based on his or her own skill level, interest, and talent. Inder excelled at evaluating her students, reaching each one in a way that would elicit the best productivity and creativity out of that student, and doing all of this while adhering to the Drawn2Art method of teaching art. She ensured that the workshop was focused and flowing, despite the various projects and student personalities. And while running our strict program, she also reached out to her students personally, developing friendly open relationships with them, encouraging them, inspiring them, and allowing them to thrive regardless of their own skill level or talent. Her calm and friendly personality allows even the most reticent students to relax, to gain confidence, and to excel under her supervision.

Although we are sad to have lost Inder, we support her endeavors to branch out from what she has been working on in this position to something she can truly call her own, that will further her career, and allow her to continue helping young students grow, learn and progress.

Please feel free to contact me if you have any questions regarding Inder's employment with Drawn2Art.

Sincerely,
